According to the second century Gospel of Mary of Magdala, Mary is Jesus' confidante, his interpreter, and his replacement. She supports Jesus' ministry financially (Luke 8:2-3) and may have been the "the beloved disciple" mentioned in John's gospel. Jesus divulges to her teachings unknown to other disciples, and Mary is the first person to see the risen Jesus. And yet in later Christian teaching, Mary of Magdala becomes a woman dishonored. This talk examines the woman, the myth, and the gospel that bears her name.
